Songs

The excitement-packed singing contest “Our Songs” boasts an innovative scoring system that fires up the contestants to produce their best performances. The prime time show entertains audiences with contrasting themes as the weeks go by, with singers aiming to impress the judges and win a place in the grand finale.

The show, which is already a proven success, brings together 10 contestants to sing their hearts out and gives them the opportunity to show their versatility. It can showcase themes such as popular songs from previous decades, rock hits, folk songs, a country’s traditional music, love songs or the hits of star singers.

Key to the success of the show’s formula are the experienced and talented five members of the jury whose task it is to bring out the best of the performers. The contestants are divided into two groups of five and in the first part of the show five singers take the stage in turn to wow the judges and the audience.

Once the first five have performed, it is time for the jury members to pass their judgement with an original scoring system. Each judge has only a certain number of points to distribute among the five performers. They can award 10 points to one of them, leaving scores of 7, 3, 5 and 1 to share out among the other four singers.

It is a tough and competitive scoring system that will bring joy or satisfaction to some and deep disappointment to the contestant who receives just one point. Each jury member will pass their own judgement and award points as they see fit, giving each contestant a chance to improve their position or sink towards the bottom of the pile.

The emotional impact of the singing and the scoring system is enhanced by the studio arrangement, with the contestants sitting on sofas with their families or friends after their performances. The presence of their loved ones will amplify their delight, frustration or sadness as the scores are announced.

For the jury members, the task is not simply to announce the points that they are awarding. They watch short clips of all the performances one more time before making their decision and then they will have to explain their reasoning as they decide which of the singers stands out as the best performer.

The performer with the highest score becomes the first finalist, to be joined by the top-scoring singer in the second group of five contestants. These two singers then battle it out in the night's final. The dream of all the contestants is to earn a place in the grand finale at the end of the series and the chance to be crowned the winner of "Our Songs".
